Why doesn't the government handle the world series? Big league moguls have decided to stage the big show after Sept. 2, the date named by Secretary Baker on which the magnates up their season and release all players of draft age so they work or fight. So far the 'govs' haven't intimated that it will prevent the series.

In the past the players have shared the receipts of the first four games of each series, and the moguls and national league have gobbled up the rest of the coin.

Now why not pay the players participating at their regular salary, pay the necessary expenses and let the rest of the proceeds to some worthy war fund or use it for purchasing athletic equipment for the soldiers?

It would mean thousands of dollars more for war purposes. The series would be helping to raise war funds instead of helping to increase the riches of the magnates.

Baseball has been classed as a non-essential sport. The government is simply suffering the players to continue in the game. Other men with their health and ruggedness are in war service. The players might well be contented with their regular salaries for the series.

And the fans would turn out in greater numbers than ever before if they knew their money was going to help beat the Hun. Why let the magnates get fat on the flood of coin that will be poured into the box office of the big games?

It looks like a good chance to raise more war funds.

Of course, the sad part of it is that the big league moguls haven't had patriotism enough to suggest this themselves.

Big league moguls won't be entertained when they close their parks this fall—possibly for the nation of the war. About fifty ball players who have the usual contracts for playing for next year in October, may make a notion to collect their full pay. The moguls have intimated that they will not pay for all players on their teams with the closing of the shortened season.

It certainly will grieve the magnates if they are compelled to fork over to those players some of the millions of dollars they derived from higher admission and refreshment prices this year.

The big league moguls gathered several thousands of dollars this year by raising the admission prices to an even amount where the war tax brought to price to odd cents. The owners said it was to save the fans the trouble of making change. The moguls never complained about being forced to count all those pennies.

Dutch Summers, the former Penn State star, who developed winning eleven college and Michigan Aggie, has offered the position of head coach at Washington and Jefferson for next fall. Morrow, who was appointed to the position after Sol Metz resigned, has asked to be released from his contract to accept a position with Uncle Sam's engineers. In Summers the Washington college will get a first class football coach.

"Big Tom" Reilly, former grid-iron mentor at New York university, has been cited by Gen. Pershing for the D. S. C. decoration. Reilly succeeded in taking a German major prisoner during the fierce fighting on the Marne drive. The significant part of the deed was that his company had just taken an entire Boche unit a short time previous.

Walter Pipp, Yankee star, has enrolled at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and begins his studies there recently for a commission in the naval aviation section.

VAUGHN AND TYLER ARE CUB MAINSTAYS

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]

New York, Aug. 21.—Eight out of every ten fans in the big leagues saw Cub pennant hopes crash and crumble when Chicago lost Alexander early in the season.

It was a hard blow, the loss of Alex, and the Cubs realized it, but now, with the season practically over, they are the best bets for the old rag. If there is a world's series in September, there is a good many of the wise ones who will back 'em to mop up the American league winners.

The big secret of the Cub success lies with Fred Mitchell, iron-jawed two-armed and resourceful manager. Mitchell has kept his club at the top because of his wonderful handling of the pitchers, and he has used at least two of this hurlers—Vaughn and Tyler—with the hand of a wizard.

Vaughn and Tyler are the men who have really held the Cubs up. The other pitchers, Douglas, et al, have been doing their share, but the forkhanded duo has sung the winning song of the Weeghmantes. Don't let 'em tell you different.

Left-handed pitchers are inclined to be frankish. You can't tell what they are going to do from one day to the next as a rule. But in the case of the Cubs' star pair, Mitchell has had two aces in the hole all season long, and when it comes to the world's series—if that classique is played—Mitchell is going to make an effort to scotch the opposition in a commission with a good chance of getting away with it.

The Red Sox, who look like the goods in the American league, are there with the class as baseball goes these days. They are the most consistent team in a league that has been proving its superiority of face years, but there are not the Red Sox of old by a whole lot, and if they face the Cubs they will face a club fully their equal. The series ought to be hot stuff with these two clubs playing.

It ought to be more like a full grown world's series than the one last fall.

STILL HAMMERING.
 Political aspirants for office are still hammering on the anvil of patriotism with resounding blows. How loyal they are and how they are to be patriotic. In the past, skillfully worded, untruthful, carefully culled phrases, clever avoidance of genuine facts and a varnish of veneered patriotism is sufficient to designate them first-class patriots, mouth patriots, if you please, for their own personal benefit.

It is easy enough to be destructive, but hard work to be constructive. One may tear down or ruin a carefully built machine, wreck an automobile, or destroy a house and leave nothing but waste material, not being mentally equipped to rebuild the destroyed article. One does not measure a patriot by his talk, but by his actions.

Governor Phillips has certainly placed the patriot and the wise state official in charge of state affairs since this nation was called into war. With many other men in public life he deplored the necessity of the United States entering the great European war. When they did enter he thought the volunteer system would be far more preferable than the draft and so expressed himself. On the other hand, he also used his authority to protest, but when the final decision was reached his record at Washington is that of accomplishing the impossible.

General Crowder, an army officer, and not a politician, has repeatedly expressed himself as more than satisfied with what Wisconsin has accomplished. "Nothing is more important for Wisconsin to do within a limited space of time," he recently wrote to Madison officials. No call made for troops, calliments or drafts, has been neglected and as a result Wisconsin's record is above par with the war department at Washington, the straight answer to any charges of disloyalty that may be made by campaign agitators.

THE ARMY DOCTORS.

Prominent among the men who are doing great work for their country are the army doctors. One fifth of the physicians have enrolled and will go to the front. These men are making a splendid patriotic offering. They are largely young and middle aged men, who have a high professional rating. They must give up their patients who they must seek their families. Often they leave their families but poorly provided for.

The family doctor who spends much of his time treating little cases of stomach trouble and rheumatism and minor ailments, is infinitely more needed in the war hospitals. At home much of his time is spent alleviating little miseries that people can bear themselves. Often their patients would be as well off without running to the doctor.

In France men are dying for lack of quick attention. The operations have to be performed very hurriedly, by men who are almost ready to drop from overwork and the strain of the faithful night. More doctors would mean that greater care should be given to operations. The wounded men could have attention more promptly, and more of them would recover.

The army physicians will acquire an operating skill that would not come in many years at home. This appeals to the love of scientific investigation. In the long run the doctor who makes the immediate sacrifice of his prospects may find that it has given him a greater professional skill which was worth the effort.

All the doctors known to us would like to go but the majority are kept at home for family considerations, advancing age, or other good reasons. Those who can break loose are needed by the men who have to stay at home.

NEWSPAPERS ESSENTIAL.

A draft board at Waterloo, Iowa, issued an edict that newspaper reporters were to appear before its august presence, and show why they should not engage in an essential occupation or be subject to draft. The board quickly disavowed the order, which appeared to have been due to a clerical error.

Secretary Baker took occasion to make it clear that news collecting is regarded as indispensable work. But a man of draft age could not claim he was indispensable. If there were older men who could take his place, if there is anyone who thinks reporters are idlers under the work or "light" men, they should follow them on those frequent days when their coat tails stick out behind, as they attempt to cover half a dozen events occurring simultaneously miles apart.

Newspaper reporters are no dodgers of fighting or any other kind of duty. Whatever army service the government calls them to undertake, will be accepted very cheerfully.

It was of course to be expected that the Washington authorities would rule newspaper work as "essential." No war could be fought without the co-operation of the newspapers, to arouse sentiment, educate the people to the issues involved and persuade them to give their co-operation in all war efforts.

War has left its mark in the newspaper offices. Many thousands of men, who have been in the front lines, are now displaying the same speed in the pursuit of the spiked helmeted pothe. Their places are often taken by older men who had fancied they had got beyond the cub reporter's routine. The newspaper reporter is an alert and resourceful fellow. He will get after the Hun with a lot of vigor and fight with his head as well as his gun.

WHY AND WHEREFORE.
 There are many who wonder wherefore in this middle over the position of the chief of police of the city.

Friends of the present chief resent the action of the council in seeking his removal and his opponents claim they have ample ground for demanding a new man be placed in charge of the department. The contest has apparently been long in preparation and the controversy has just begun. It is up to the Police and Police Commission to take the final action and thus far they have delayed matters by refusing to act on the council's recommendation and holding the matter in abeyance. Meanwhile the whys and wherefores are being earnestly discussed in almost every gathering where civic matters come up for discussion.

Among the people who wonder why groceries cost so much are those who demand that the grocer get out of his team and deliver anything they order any time within a half hour.

A nation wide campaign to raise more sheep is reported. The first thing to be done is to convert a considerable number of mongrel dogs into sausage.

The strong pro-German convictions formerly entertained by some newspapers are better accounted for since we have learned about that $50,000,000 propaganda fund.

A good place to put any people who have been selling worthless raincoats to the government, would be a jail without any roof on it to protect them from the weather.

Congress is to sit until November, but a large section of the congressmen will be out mending their fences instead of looking around the cloak rooms.

The Huns haven't won any battles in the field lately, but they frequently are able to persuade some of our workmen to strike.

The newspapers that make their success by appealing to fools usually find out that the fool element is not much valued by advertisers.

The Germans claim they got their army out of the trap without losing a man. Must have been because they ran so fast.

There is bitter complaint from the slackers that the draft examining boards don't find out all their defects.

The Germans claim that they are supermen, which is at least proved by the fact that they are superlatives.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

"MADE IN GERMANY."
 In the days of peace for the world they stamped their mark on the goods they made:
 But never again will they flaunt their name.

For they have made it a badge of shame.
 They've stripped it bare of its outward pride
 And shown the greed and the lust inside.

And men will shudder when'er they see
 Holt's label red: "Made in Germany."
 Before their eyes dead men will float
 Who were left to die in an open boat.

To the end of time will pictures rise
 Of demons high in the summer skies
 Seeking the haunts where the wounded lie.

To murder them as they hurry by,
 Nor all their skill nor their art will
 Hide the captive who they crucified.

A little child with his right hand
 Will point when the years have traveled on
 And the sign of the German heart and schools
 With the crimson blood of the babes in pools.

And the innocent dead, with their faces fair,
 Bombed by the cowards high in air,
 Will rise long after the war shall cease
 To shame the Hun in the years of peace.

Made in Germany! men will start
 As they see that badge of the German heart.
 On whatever that stamp of shame is set,
 There will be the curse of a thing unclean.

They have fouled, with sin, what was once their pride,
 And they shall live by the world denied:
 For wherever that mark through the years is met
 There will rise the scenes that men can't forget.

WHOS WHO in the Daily News

FRANK BARTLETT WILLIS.
 The recent nomination of Frank Bartlett Willis as republican candidate for governor of Ohio marks another step in his political career.

Willis has been honored by the republican party many times before and an unusual thing about the coming election is that it will make the third time that he has had as his opponent a man who has beaten the other once at the polls. James M. Cox. Each man has beaten the other once at the polls. James M. Cox. Each man has beaten the other once at the polls.

Before he had ever held public office, Willis was looked upon as a candidate for the man in the ranks of Ohio republicanism.

Willis was born in Lewis Center, Delaware county, December 25, 1871. After attending district and high schools at Galena, he entered Ohio Northern university at Ada in 1890, graduating in 1893 and becoming in 1894 a member of the Phi Kappa Phi honor society. He then taught in political economy, civil government, United States history and geometry.

His political successes have been due to no one cause more than his connection with the Ada institution for a legion of former Ada students organized to help him win in his first gubernatorial fight and has stood by him ever since.

The interest of Willis in politics began in the early '90s. He served in the house of representatives of the Ohio general assembly from 1900 through 1903. In 1908 he went to congress from the Eighth Ohio district, serving in the lower house of the national body three terms.

In 1914, he left congress to become the nominee of the republicans for governor, and was elected. Renominated in 1916, he was defeated by the man he had beaten in 1914, Governor James M. Cox.

Willis is tall and of heavy build, a powerful speaker with a voice that is strong and carrying. He was a delegate to the republican national convention in 1916, and made the speech that placed in nomination Theodore E. Burton of Ohio. He is an ardent advocate of the "old fashioned" tariff and McKinley protective tariff, and of prohibition.

The candidate is married and has one daughter, Miss Helen Willis. His home is in Delaware.

 Back with marshals and quinces.
 The man who is backing is fine.
 Back up the kulturnist bunk.
 The medals and scepters and junk.
 The Yankies are burning,
 They're cooking a fine stew.
 The road into Paris is puny,
 "Invincible armies" beware,
 For freedom is filling the air.
 The Yanks can't be trusted,
 Divine right is "busted".
 There isn't a minute to spare.
 Aboard for old Potsdam, too-too!
 Drop all the booty quickly and scoot.

The Franks have been faded,
 The game has been raided,
 The Kaiser is getting the boot.

So the young likes thought they were going to get all the glory out of this war! Well, what do you think about that.

Wait till old Uncle Henry, who used to hit a 16-foot piece with a squirrel rifle at 500 yards gets busy.
 Then we shall see what we shall see.

Note that the government will place an extra tax on pleasure cars. Does a flyover come under that head?

"THIS OLD WORLD."
 'Tis hard to recognize it now,
 For it's a vastly different place.
 Since we, perforce, are face to face
 With sordid Fate
 Impelled by hellish fate we inter,
 Illusions each day we inter,
 Yea, gilded folk and laborer
 And potentate.

The pain, the anguish of it all,
 But leads us to a hoiler state
 And clears both the small and great
 Of petty things
 And vision brings
 A golden phase of human life,
 A world reborn of foe and strife
 And sufferings.

STRICTLY UP TO DATE

Stirring Address
 Waupaca.—"We will win this war after we have driven the German army back upon their own domain with their faces toward Berlin and with American bayonets at their back, and there will be established a world democracy with international tribunals which will prevent the recurrence ever again of just a world cataclysm as has been imposed upon us by the Kaiser, and there will be a world democracy founded on the principles, enunciated by Thomas Jefferson in the American Declaration of Independence, that all men were created equal and that governments derived their just powers from the people," declared E. E. Browne, Congressman from the Eighth district in an address at Crystal Lake. Mr. Browne is taking a short rest from his congressional labors to visit and talk with his constituents and to remove some impressions made by opponents. He defined his course in Congress.

Contrary To Law
 Madison.—That a calendar with a flag printed thereon, together with advertising matter is contrary to law, was the opinion of Attorney General Harvey E. Stutts, district attorney of Lincoln County.

A Great Many Suits are Cut on Straight Lines

"Straight lines in suits" apparently is one of the dictums of the suit fashions.

Designs are many and varied.

One of the most favored is the model that buttons from the neck to the waistline.

Many models are fur trimmed, sometimes on the collar only, and others the collar and hem and again the cuffs, as well.

Pockets and banding are sometimes simulated by clever outlining of yarn embroidery or silk tracing, or with braids.

Some of the cleverest and best informed designers of New York are responsible for these suits now coming into the section for your inspection tomorrow, styles you will undoubtedly be enthusiastic about.

Flowers are always welcome and may be sent to the mother with "Congratulations" written on one's business card.

Miss R. C. The young man's mother should have extended the invitation for a week end visit, and you should not accept his invitation until it has been confirmed by his mother, either in person or by letter.

Stuffed Baked Potatoes (from above menu). Bake large smooth skinned potatoes. When done cut off one side of the potato and remove the inside, leaving the skin whole, like a cup.

Mash or rice the potato, add milk, butter, pepper and salt as for mashed potatoes, beat very light, fill the skin and return to oven to brown. When ready to serve place small piece of parsley in each.

Cornmeal Pie—Mix one tablespoon flour or cornstarch to a smooth paste with one-quarter cup of milk. Add one ounce melted chocolate, one teaspoon butter substitute, three tablespoons chopped raisins, three tablespoons honey or white corn syrup, a pinch of salt, three-quarter cup of milk.

Cook in a double boiler until it thickens, then add two well beaten egg yolks and one-half teaspoon vanilla. Pour in a baked crust. Beat whites of eggs, spread over top and brown in oven.

Rice pie crust for above filling: Two-thirds rice flour, one-third wheat flour. Make just like wheat pie crust, only do not use quite as much shortening.

Apple Dumplings—Peel four tart apples and remove cores. Sift one cup of wheat or one cup rice flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt into a mixing bowl. Work into a heaping teaspoon of butter and one of lard or substitute. Mix with a knife, using enough milk to make a soft dough. Roll out and cut in four pieces. Place an apple on each square, putting a little sugar on top. Roll around apple and bake until brown. Serve with the following sauce or cream and sugar:

Sauce—Beat one-half cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon cinnamon, two tablespoons flour (which has been moistened with water and stirred to a smooth batter) until creamy. Add a pinch of boiling water and cook a few minutes.

Scotch Potato Cakes—To two cups hot mashed potatoes add two tablespoons hot milk, one tablespoon butter, one egg and salt and pepper to taste; beat all well together and spread one inch in thickness in a square pan.

Let cool and cut in squares.

Beat one egg with a tablespoon of water; coat cakes with this and then with crumbs. Dip again in egg and crumbs and saute a delicate brown.

Serve with steak.

Fruit Soup—Cook two cups fruit in one quart of water with corn syrup sweetening to taste. Cherries, raspberries, lemons or plums may be used. Add the grated rind of half a lemon, small stick of cinnamon, and a dash of salt. Cook until the fruit is soft. Press through a sieve and add one cup of apricot or orange juice, which has been softened in cold water, is added when fruit is nearly done.

Potato Soups—Take cold mashed potatoes, moisten with milk and work into sufficient flour with which baking powder is mixed to form a firm dough, adding pinch of salt. Roll out, sprinkle with flour, roll in beaten egg; again in flour; cut in strips. Bake on hot griddle. Butter hot.

A SPLENDID IDEA.

He Gets an Extra Point.
At a cottage a few doors away the little boy who comes from another public school, practicing swimming with great fervor. "You get an extra point in school of you can swim fifty yards," he explained to me.

A few days ago we had as a guest a young professor who dove so well and so gracefully that we all marveled. "You must have been swimming since you were a baby," we said. "Never swam a stroke till I was 22," he answered. "Then I went to the University of W. and there you have to learn to swim and dive as part of the course."

These three instances came under my attention in the course of a few days. I hope they represent a tendency rather than a coincidence.

Think of What It Will Mean to Some of These Children.

Consider the possible inestimable value of being able to swim, and add to that the fact that there is no exercise that does more develop one's physique, and that it is, moreover, an exercise that has in it so much of pleasure that young people do not have to be constantly urged to keep at it, and surely you can think of no finer gift the inhabitants of any town could make to the younger generation than a swimming pool. If this is not possible, the sport can be encouraged by giving an extra point to the pupils who will avail themselves of vacation opportunities to make definite progress in it.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

Next time, Peter Possum, take a Don't be jumping anywhere, Exercise a little care, Older people make mistakes, Sailing on the great big lakes."

And then Billy Bunny laughed for it was he who had just sung this little song, and the Peter Possum said, "Thank you, Mr. Wise William Bunny. I'll be more careful next time." And he ran off to the friendly Forest to tell his Aunt that he had been sailing on a great big river!

And if the Babbling Brook doesn't turn around and run backward, then the Old Mill Wheel turns the other way and grinds the corn into lollypop flour. I'll tell you another story tomorrow.

Little pink nose maybe a million times more or less. And the reason he said so was because he was so sure of it. Yes, sir! Billy Bunny's little pink nose was good as eyes, and maybe better. For there in the middle of the Babbling Brook was Peter Possum. And what do you suppose he was doing. You'd never guess, so I'll tell you. He was riding on a round flat something, and that round flat something was Tommy Turtle. Billy Bunny was sitting on his back, for Tommy Turtle was his house. And after that he turned to Billy Bunny and said:

"I didn't know it was Tommy Turtle. You Babbling Brook, so I stepped on his back, thinking it was a round stone, and when it started off down the water I just said, 'Oh, dear no.' He thought it was a little ship that was taking him for a sail."

Get off my back! Get off my back!" cried Tommy Turtle, for he was getting tired, you see, of carrying Peter Possum, for Peter Possum hadn't bought a ticket, I'm sure of that, and next time to play ferryboat unless one gets paid for it in some way.

"I'll get off if you'll take me to shore," said the little possum, and as soon as his Turtle Boat came close to the bank he jumped off. And after that he turned to Billy Bunny and said:

"I didn't know it was Tommy Turtle. You Babbling Brook, so I stepped on his back, thinking it was a round stone, and when it started off down the water I just said, 'Oh, dear no.' He thought it was a little ship that was taking him for a sail."

"Ethelinda!" he cried in sudden fright. "Are you ill?"
She started, for, glancing for five minutes in her mirror before coming downstairs she thought she had looked particularly well in her new blue panthelette caught up with spliced georginae.

"I'll," she echoed. "Why, Clarence, whatever you mean?"
"You're so so deadly pale," he explained. "Perhaps you have been stricken with a slight case of heart disease. Shall I stand behind you in case you keep over? Not that I want to alarm you or anything."

"Quickly, she felt her pulse. "Nonsense, Clarence," she insisted. "I've never felt better in my life."

"You must be mistaken, Ethelinda," he persisted. "It would be impossible to feel well and still be so pale. Why, if you were any paler it would be impossible. You must worry, or anything, but perhaps you'll die in your bed to-night."

Ethelinda rushed to the mirror, and then drew nine rapid breaths of relief. "Tidling boy!" she laughed. "I've just got a little more powder on than usual, that's all."

And he laughed at his own foolish fears and kissed most of it off.

MARRIAGES BY TELEGRAMS BANNED BY STATE OFFICE

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]
Albany, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Love may laugh at locksmiths and the miles that separate plighted pairs, but the attorney general's office here can't see the joke.

All of which means that the marriages by telegram which have been popular at Camp Mills for many moons have had their legality questioned. The attorney general's office believes that they will not hold, and no more licenses for long-distance weddings will be issued. Which also means that a score of soldiers who have gone to the front congratulating themselves that they had dodged the tortures of a ceremony will find this agony staring them in the face on their return.

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MISS THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Can you give me a good remedy for oily hair? My hair is terribly oily and straight and I have a good head of hair, but cannot make it look well. I wash it about every three weeks, and two days after I wash it, it is as oily as ever. N.S.

A tonic for oily hair is made with the following ingredients: one-half ounce of alcohol, one-half ounce of glycerine, one-half ounce of castor oil, one-half ounce of olive oil, one-half ounce of sweet almond oil, one-half ounce of rose water, one-half ounce of lavender water, one-half ounce of bergamot water, one-half ounce of lemon water, one-half ounce of orange water, one-half ounce of grapefruit water, one-half ounce of lime water, one-half ounce of pineapple water, one-half ounce of strawberry water, one-half ounce of raspberry water, one-half ounce of blueberry water, one-half ounce of blackberry water, one-half ounce of raspberry water, one-half ounce of blackberry water, one-half ounce of raspberry water, one-half ounce of blackberry water.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: When a boy asks a girl to kiss him good night and she refuses, and afterwards he says, "What do you think of him?"

A boy who cares only to kiss a girl is not very well developed. Boys and girls of more than ordinary intelligence have thoughts in common and they enjoy being together for an exchange of thoughts. A girl should never regret the loss of friendship of a boy who only desires her kisses.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you kindly tell me of something which will relieve my feet of perspiration? Every pair of shoes I wear is ruined on this account. I have tried nearly everything in vain.

A wash alone will not cure the trouble. During the feet every morning with a mixture of borax and salicylic acid, with a pinch of the same in each shoe, will generally give relief. But where this fails the following is said to be a sure cure: Borax one-half ounce. Alcohol two ounces. Acid of salicylic one-half ounce. Mix the above ingredients. Rub the feet morning, noon and night with this solution, after washing them well in hot salt water, or a wash of permanganate of potash, ten grains to one pint of water.

HIVES.
Hives, urticaria, nettlerash, artie, or nettlestitch, is usually an acute, sometimes a chronic disorder of the skin, characterized by the appearance of irregular wheals or raised welts resembling mosquito bites, white or red, and which usually are accompanied by various degrees of itching, burning, tingling or smarting. Attacks are sometimes ushered in by constitutional upset, such as indigestion, headache, loss of appetite, headache and general tired feeling.

The causes of urticaria are innumerable but all alike. Bites or stings of mosquitoes, flies, bees, bedbugs, gnats, wasps, bees and caterpillars, the wounds inflicted by the jellyfish, the stinging nettle weed, and other low, mean forms of animal and plant life. Medicines such as quinine, chloral, arsenic, salicylic acid (including domestic use of aspirin), senna, opium or morphine, various vaccines, anti-toxins. Foods such as cheese, pork, sausage, lobster, caviar, strawberries, oatmeal, cucumbers, mushrooms, honey, beer, champagne. The essential element in the production of hives is in most cases some protein substance (nitrogenous material) to which the individual is "sensitized," that is, unduly susceptible.

The first principle in treatment is the removal of the cause, which im-

Love in a Hurry

By GELETT BURGESS

Flodie, returning, noticed that Rosamund showed too much silk stocking, also that one stocking had begun to "run." She noticed that Rosamund's shirtwaist was not quite fresh, noticed that her nails, though highly polished, were not absolutely—well—chaste. One heel was a bit run over; her moonstone ring needed cleaning; lace, part real and part imitation; eyebrows lengthened a little with the pencil; tiny rip in her glove. There was nothing an ordinary man would have seen, nothing that would have hurt, for him; but Flodie saw and damned and said so.

"Here are the matches, Miss Gale. I'll look up the prints this afternoon, when I have more time."

"Oh, thanks. Have a cig?" Rosamund held them up impatiently. "Oh, don't you smoke?" Very sarcastic was Rosamund's tone. "No, you don't look it, exactly." She laughed easily, confident of her own superior appearance.

Flodie's lips grew white; it would not take much more to make her cry. "Oh, I'd hardly expect you to understand, anyway?" She was blowing rings very prettily.

"Oh, Mr. Bonistelle is going to have a party tonight."

"Really? I'll have to ask him about that." She examined her finger nails. "I believe I'll come."

"I'm sorry, but the invitations were all sent out over a week ago, Miss Gale."

"Mine must have been addressed wrong."

"I don't think I ever make that kind of a mistake."

"No," said Rosamund deliberately, "the mistake you make is in supposing that you run this place."

Flodie eyed her. "Well, you set me such a good example, you know, Miss Gale—really—"

The door opened, and Hall came out of the dark room blinking.

"Hello, Hall! How's the boy?" said Rosamund, and rearranged her pose quickly and dextrously.

Exit Flodie, to dry her eyes in the office—to swear her innocent little "Darn it all, anyway!" to wait and wonder, to worry and grow ever more fearful, as the voices reached her ears.

Hall's face lighted as he saw Rosamund. Despite defects of detail, Rosamund, so nonchalantly posed, so fair and flashing, animate with youth and confidence, was, as ever, a picture in which he rejoiced. She had none of Carolyn's severe, clean-cut boyishness, none of the fullness of Mrs. Royall's aristocratic maturity. She was a woman that women would always shun, and men fight for, love—and abandon.

Hall looked at her, and her beauty sank deep into him. A golden tendril of hair in front of her ear caught his glance; and thence to the saucy frolicsome dimple in her cheek, the little uplifted corner of her delicate mouth, her white even teeth, the straight line of her nose, her finely-drawn eyebrows, to her violet-blue eyes, his quick glance traveled reveling. He did not speak till: "By jove, I'd like to take you in that pose!"

She, of course, immediately changed it to prove her lack of vanity, but fell into another as artful. Well she knew her trade.

"Oh, don't talk shop all the time," she said. "I'm just calling. I've been posing for three hours with Deerfield, and I'm all in. For heaven's sake let me sit where I can't see a camera."

Say, Hall, how about this party to-night? You're not trying to cut me out, are you?" She went up to him, took him by the two lapels of his coat, showed her teeth, and with her eyes, dared him to touch her.

He ran his hand through his hair. "By jove," he replied slowly, "didn't you get an invitation? Miss Fisher must have forgotten it."

She made a little gesture of reproach. "Oh, of course, if you didn't want me—you know, Hall, I never butt in. Never mind!" Pouting prettily, she turned away.

"Why, of course I want you to come!" What else could Hall say? But indeed, looking upon her, he meant it now. "Say, you're devilish pretty, did you know it? I've never seen you look so well!"

Rosamund needed no more of an in-itation. "Well," she said comfortingly, "if you really want me, I'll promise to make some of that smart bunch of yours look like washwomen and that's no myth, either. Say, Hall, I've got a new dress I'm dying to have you see—smart as pepper! It's some rag, believe me! Can I go the limit?" She circled her corsage, indicating a daintily low-cut neck.

He laughed and nodded. "Oh, you can get away with anything in the way of clothes. By jove, you'd look all right in jumper and overalls."

"Good idea! Let's try it some time! Queen of the Bricklayers!" She struck a graceful attitude.

"Lord, you are pretty!" Hall said meditatively, watching her.

She gave him a look, caught a new expression on his face, and proceeded to work it up. Her first step was to say reflectively, as she cast down her golden lashes, "Say, Hall, I don't know—I guess I'd better not come tonight, though, after all. I don't believe you want me."

"Of course I want you, Rosamund!" He went up to her and tried to take her hand. "Do come—please!"

"No," she drew away from him pettishly. "I'm not coming. I've decided." Rosamund flung herself down on the couch.

Of course he followed her. "Now, Rosamund, see here!" This time he

he had carelessly played. A wave of tenderness for her swept over him—regret for his having touched her keen nerve; but it was colored, also, with the pride of the male in his conquest. The chase had already excited him. She was there, beautiful and fond, his victim—conquered by his force of personality. Try as he might to subdue this baseness, his sentiment came to the party.

"Fine! You will come, then?"

"Of course, I'll come! I say, Hall, if you give her consent, we'll announce our engagement tonight!" Her eyes sparkled, as she held out her hands and let herself be folded in his arms for a farewell kiss. In that caress his fears were forgotten. Then she freed herself and walked to the office door.

"Good-by, Hall, dear! Oh, I hope we can be happy! And say, won't those swells open their eyes, though, when they hear the news?" She hurried through the office without so much as a nod to Flodie.

One of our boys came out of the surgeon's dugout with his arm in a sling.

"How did it happen?" asked the crowd.

"I was down on the bank of the Marne," explained the soldier, "and the enemy laid down a barrage. I was sort of tired and, not thinking, rested my elbow on top of the barrage. Then the damn thing moved and I went down on my arm."

The bishop was addressing the Sunday school. In his most expressive tones he was saying, "And now, children, let me tell you a very sad fact. In Africa there are ten million miles of territory without a single Sunday school where little boys and girls can spend their Sundays. Now, what should we all try and save up our money and do?"

And the class, as one voice, replied in ecstatic unison, "Go to Africa!"

"May I ask how old you are?" said the vacationist to the old villager.

"I be just a hundred."

"Well, I doubt if you'll live to see another hundred years," said the other, trying to make conversation.

"Well, don't know so much about that," was the ready response. "I be stronger now than when I started on the first hundred."

"What are they moving the church for?" asked the inquisitive visitor.

"Well, stranger," replied the man, "I'm mayor of these diggins, and I'm for law enforcement. We've got an ordinance that says no saloon shall be nearer than three hundred feet from a church. I give 'em three days to move the church."

A large number of garments were completed but those in charge of the various branches of the work assert that it is necessary for all to do their best in order to fill the required quota by the end of the month.

There is still much to be done. The branch has always filled every quota and is very anxious not to fall for the month of August. The auxiliary, of which Mrs. Hans Olinsted is chairman, turned in a large supply of work at the last meeting, which was pronounced "perfect" by those inspecting it. Two women who are pronounced "expert knitters" are Mesdames N. K. Heggard Ole Bonnet. Sr. These women are both over 80 years old.

The following excerpts are from letters received by his sister from Stanley Ashby, who is in a hospital in France.

"Dear Sister: Will try and scratch you a few lines to let you know that I am getting along fine; am able to be around, so you see the wound is not very bad. I have written to Mother, telling her of my being hit by a shrapnel ball. I suppose by the time you get this you will have heard about me. But it is not at all bad, so do not worry. We are in a large town. Some of the boys went out to look around today. I will go tomorrow if I can. The French people treat us fine. They have good nurses at this hospital. I don't know when I will get any mail from you, but I hope it won't be very long at the most. As I lost all my pictures there I was wounded, I haven't a single thing but a letter from Mary, which was in my shirt pocket; the rest were in the coat and I lost the coat. I have a belt buckle with 'Got mit uns' on it. Maybe I'll send it home soon if I can find a convenient way to do so. I took it off from a dirty gun. Later, I am now in an American hospital. Have been here three days. Am getting along fine; able to be out. I was just over to the Y to get this paper. They have movies there every night and I go to all of them. You see, it is a great change from the front around here. I am getting a good rest, anyway. I don't suppose I will get mail for the while yet, but hope it won't be very long, anyway. 'Dutch' (George Berkley of Milton) is here, too. He isn't very bad off though. We are getting good care and have some fine nurses. Well this isn't very much and maybe you can't read it, but you will know that I am all right."

GET NEW KIDNEYS!

The kidneys are the most overworked organs of the human body, and when they fail in their work of filtering out the waste products of the system, things begin to happen.

One of the first warnings is pain or stiffness in the lower part of the back, highly colored urine, loss of appetite, nausea, irritation, or even stone in the bladder. These symptoms indicate a condition that may lead to that dreaded and fatal malady, Bright's disease, for which there is said to be no cure.

You can almost certainly find immediate relief in GOLD MEDAL Haarslem Oil Capsules. For more than 200 years this famous preparation has been an unfailing remedy for all kidney bladder and urinary troubles. Get it at any drug store, and if it does not give you almost immediate relief, your money will be refunded. Be sure you get the GOLD MEDAL brand. None other genuine. In boxes, three sizes.
